CAUSE FOR THANKS

BISHOP E. H. HUGHES.

"Give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness."—Psa. 30:4.

If the spirit of gratitude is to be awakened in the hearts of those who receive this Thanksgiving message, it will be necessary that we think together of some ground that is unmistakably common to all. It is probably true that, if we wished to do so, we could find reason for thankfulness in the material side of our lives; for we have not been reduced to starvation or nakedness or homelessness. But without doubt there would be vast differences among us in this respect. Some of us have walked with steady feet up the ascent of prosperity. Others of us have slipped down the hill, which we had before climbed toward ease and independence.

From this you will see that if our thankfulness is to be unanimous, its field must be above our differences in situation and in opinion. Our gratitude must go up toward him who is the owner of the earth, with its silver and gold; toward him who by the discipline of the world's suffering prepares men for the painless and deathless country; toward him who presides over all our partisanship and is to be at last the ruler of all rulers. In this effort to gain a common and lofty ground for our gratitude, let us raise our thanksgiving to the very highest thing and let us heed this ancient commandment, "Give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness."

You will note that this text concerns thanksgiving with remembrance. Perhaps more than any other day in the year this holiday is a day for a personal retrospect. The only day which would challenge its field in this respect is New Year's day, and that is even its name indicates, looks forward rather than backward; it is a day for resolves rather than for remembrance. Whatever may be the reason for a man's gratitude, it has to do in some form with his memory. If he is thankful for his future it is because he throws into it the confidence that he has won from his past. This is true in reference even to the gratitude that a man would feel for the promised heaven. He who is thankful for worldly success gives thanks because he remembers; he who is thankful for bodily health gives thanks because he remembers. And he who is thankful for the highest things gives thanks at the remembrance of God's holiness. Thinking is simply remembering seasoned with justice and reverence; it is thinking backward over the past and upward to God. It is thought climbing from the lowest to the highest. It is the mind traversing its old journey, recognizing that God's company was all along the way, and lifting up here and there memories of the divine holiness. The word of the psalmist thus states the process through which one must come to his real thanksgiving.

But we have here given not merely the path along which gratitude comes, but also the goal which gratitude must reach. Unless a man's heart arrives at God, the day is without meaning. An atheistic people could have no Thanksgiving day. Such a day with out God would be an eye with nothing to see, a voice with nothing to hear, a heart with nothing to love. It is true that men might have a Thanksgiving day wherein they should pass from house to house and from man to man, giving praise to human-kind for help, and friendship.

But in the ordinary sense a Thanksgiving day is impossible without a God. It is the conception that he broods in holiness over our lives that alone gave the day its historic beginning and continues it until now. This psalmist thinker leads us straight to this thought. True gratitude cannot stop short of God. If ever a man is the victim of his own unfaith, it must be on Thanksgiving day. He cannot be grateful to nothingness. At that time no man can really get on unless he has a God. In deepest truth he can have no gratitude because it is impossible for him to obey the command, "Give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness."

Thanksgiving, a Hunger Festival.

"There is a story—loved by all German people, and happily by the rest of mankind who know it—of gold shining at the bottom of the rushing river of ages. No atom of it was ever taken away, because it was guarded by the immortal vigilance. Man's faith has always been that the gold of autumn between the shores of the hills will gleam in its place until the divine forsakes it. He has always worshipped the god of the yellow corn.

"Thus Thanksgiving Day has perhaps within itself two elements of perpetuity. It is the festival of the two hungers—the hunger of the fields, and the hunger of the harvestor that he may himself escape the law of the harvest, which is to perish."—Munsey's Magazine.

A PUMPKIN PIE VISION

By WILBUR D. NESBIT.

Old Doddridge ate his frugal lunch
Of milk and pumpkin pie,
And fell to musing, as he ate,
Of days that were gone by.

The pie a rich aroma sent
To his reflective brain,
And, oh, the pleasures it called up—
An old-time country lane.

An old-time country lane, with grass
All straggling by the side;
A boy, who trudged along the path,
With basket at his side—

A jolly boy, whose eyes were keen,
Who felt inclined to sing,
And saw the glory of the fall,
And fun in everything.

And then he saw a comely girl,
With cheeks of honest red,
Who smiled at him with sunny glance,
And tossed her shapely head.

He saw the old school-house again,
And heard the teacher speak;
And on the roads of frozen snow
He heard the wagons creak.

He saw the shellbark hickory tree;
He saw the kitchen door;
He saw the pantry shelves again—
With pumpkin pies galore;

He sniffed the tang of elder sweet—
The bloom of days gone by—
And then old Doddridge wakened up
And ate his pumpkin pie.

IN EVERYTHING GIVE THANKS

Knowledge of God's Love and Power
Is the Supreme Cause for Thanksgiving.

Abundant harvests, national prosperity, peace and security under a government of our own choice—these are certainly grounds for thanksgiving in which every citizen can and should take part. But it is quite possible—in fact it is a common mistake—to accentuate these and other outward blessings in such a way as to make it appear as if, without them, we would as a nation have little or no ground for thanksgiving; whereas the strongest reason for universal thanksgiving would still remain if none of these were present.

The knowledge that God loves the world, that he reigns supreme and controls all forces, and is overruling all events to the ultimate overthrow of everything that is evil and establishment of absolute righteousness—that is the supreme cause for thanksgiving in us far as the things of this world are concerned.

But national thanksgiving can never be anything more than a hollow sham unless the hearts of the worshippers are warmed by personal gratitude to God for his personal love and care and protection, and for the precious and exceeding great promises which he has given us. No heart can be truly grateful to God that has not learned to trust God and to see his hand and his love in all the experiences of life.

The Facts About the McCrary Robbery

From reading the McCrary County News of last week one would think that that splendid gentleman, D. E. McQuary, editor of the Pine Knot News, had been held up and robbed of a large amount of money and valuable papers. McQuary is trying to handle that lie just like he did the 200 armed men that attended the meetings of the canvassing board at Pine Knot when the board was trying to steal the election. McQuary published in his own paper that 200 armed men from Whitley City had been in Pine Knot to intimidate those honest men. Not satisfied with that he sent the same lie to some of the daily papers. Its the same old Duck Hogue scheme, tell a lie then swear to it. Anything right or wrong to help Pine Knot, McQuary says that he went to the Whitley City Improvement Company's office to get a certified copy of the articles of incorporation of that company from the County Clerk. McQuary knew that the county clerk's office at that time was not kept in the Whitley City Improvement Company's office, but to make his story sound good he says that it is. County Clerk, Joe Myrick, has his office separate and apart from the office of the Whitley City Improvement Company, and every one else since the last election.

The truth about the whole matter is that McQuary went to the office of the Whitley City Improvement Company in Sampson's absence to get a copy of the articles of incorporation of the Whitley City Improvement Company. The original papers are kept in a pigeon hole box on a table in the Whitley City Improvement Company's office. When Sampson returned to his office and was informed of McQuary's visit and what he wanted, Sampson immediately looked for these papers and they were gone. He thought McQuary had them. In passing through Stennis Monday evening Sampson saw McQuary at the depot. He asked him for his papers and McQuary refused to give them up. Sampson finally persuaded McQuary to show him that he did not have the paper. When McQuary convinced Sampson that he did not have the papers Sampson passed on. He did not compel McQuary at the point of a revolver to give up any papers or anything else. Sampson says he had no revolver, and did not threaten McQuary in any way. McQuary assisted by Judge Jones, W. F. Hinkle and others, had framed up a scheme to give Sampson some of the same medicine they gave County Clerk, Joe Myrick. Its an easy matter to get a warrant in Pine Knot for any one that is for Whitley City for the County Sent.

One Cent Postage

Local business men are greatly interested in the campaign now being conducted for one cent letter postage. Active steps looking toward the inauguration of the lower postage rate will be taken by congress this winter according to the present outlook.

Now that the parcels post problem has been disposed of, the next important step in postal affairs in this country will be the inauguration of one cent letter postage, according to the officers of the National One Cent Letter Postage Association, which is conducting a campaign for one cent postage.

Business men here are backing the movement for the lower rate. The association already has a big membership in this state, and is constantly seeking to enlarge it, so that when the real battle for lower postage is waged in congress next winter, the association will receive ample backing from the business men, whom it will most benefit.

Many important postal reforms have been inaugurated during the past year, resulting in the elimination of a huge deficit and the accumulation of a creditable cash surplus. In addition to this plan has been adopted for a limited parcels post, to be put into effect early next year. Advocates of one cent postage declare that in simple justice the government must establish the lower rate at once.

Under present conditions first-class mail is paying a surplus to the government of over $62,000,000 a year. Although it requires two cents to mail a letter anywhere in the United States, it is estimated that it actually costs the government about one cent to carry it. The post office department has always been operated with a view to carrying mail at cost. At the present time the department receives on first-class mail a revenue of at least $4 per pound equal to $1680 per ton, thus making a profit of 66 per cent. Although first-class mail supplies less one-eighth of the total volume of the mails, yet it pays 75 per cent of the total revenue. This is the principal reason why the advocates of one cent postage claim the rate should be cut in two.

Business men of this town say they would have their postage accounts cut exactly in half were the new rate inaugurated. At the present time they claim, an enormous deficit is caused on second class mail through the cartage to extreme points throughout the country of magazine mail. Magazines, some of them charging from $4.00 to $5.00 a page for advertisements, are carried throughout the United States for one cent per pound or $20 a ton compared to $1680 per ton which business men pay on letters. The large proportion of second class mail matter carried throughout the country is said to be weekly and monthly magazine matter on which publishers are making vast profits.

"You pay more than ninety cents per pound for carrying letters about the United States although it costs less than half that sum to transport them," declares Assistant Postmaster General James J. Holt. "To correct this manifest injustice we intend to ask congress to lower first class mail from two cents to one cent and to so adjust other classes as to put them on a cost paying basis.

"I certainly believe that one cent letter postage will pay if rates are adjusted. During the fiscal year of 1911 the government made a profit of $62,031,990.65 on first-class mail, a profit of $182,184.29 on third-class mail and a surplus of $6,601,574 on fourth class mail, while it suffered a loss of $66,336,662.68 on second class mail."

Hundreds of commercial bodies, chambers of commerce, boards of trade, and national business associations, as well as thousands of individual business houses, have endorsed the campaign for one cent postage. A bill providing for the lower rate will be introduced in congress this winter, and will be supported by commercial bodies and other organizations located all over the country. The American Bankers Association in session at Detroit in September unanimously adopted resolutions favoring one cent postage, and urging the government to adopt the new rate at this winter's session of congress.

An unusually active campaign on behalf of the propaganda for one cent letter postage is being conducted by the National One Cent Letter Postage Association, which has its headquarters in Cleveland. Its officers are Charles Wm. Burrows, president, and George T. McClutosh, secretary and treasurer. Its advisory board is made up of some of the biggest merchants throughout the country.

Millions of small stamps are being distributed throughout the United States for use on correspondence of business houses, urging the lower rate, and active steps will be taken this winter to press through congress a bill providing for one cent postage.

A REAL THANKSGIVING

By DONALD ALLEN.

"I was a girl I wouldn't go walking too far," said old Uncle Robert as a girl of 20 passed him on her way down to the gate of the farmhouse.

"And why not?" she asked as she almost came to a pause.

"Well, according to my ideas, it's going to rain and snow and blow and hail, and when the storm does break she's going to be a buster. You live in the city and don't know anything about the storms we have out here. I've seen it when we didn't have a train along for four straight days."

"I wanted to go to the postoffice to mail a letter."

"It's three miles there and back, and if I was you I'd put it off. Maybe somebody'll be passing that you can send it by. Tomorrow's Thanksgiving, you know, and we are going to have the awfulest, biggest, nicest dinner anybody ever set down to. It's in your honor, you know. There'll be a turkey, a duck and a chicken; there'll be cranberry sass, pumpkin pies, currant jelly, sweet cider and apple dumplings; there'll be—"

"I think I'll just walk a little ways, anyhow," said the girl as she opened the gate and passed down the highway towards the village and the railroad depot.

"And if you come home as wet as a hen don't say I didn't warn ye. It's going to come, and it's going to be a buster."

Half an hour later, a middle-aged woman with a motherly face and voice came out on the steps and asked:

"Pa, do you reckon it's goin' to storm?"

"Sure as ducks."

"Where's Minnie?"

"Oh, she's gone for a santer. I give her warning. What's she wantin' to mail a letter for? I hadn't mailed a letter nor got one in 20 years, and I guess I'm about as well off as most folks. I was going to ask her but forgot it."

"Don't you ask her a word about it," cautioned the wife as she came down to him. "I guess Minnie's got something on her mind, and it ain't none of your business. I reckon she'll tell me when she gets ready. Leastwise, I ain't goin' to do any pumping."

"Something on her mind, eh? That's funny. Didn't know that girls ever had anything on their minds except new clothes. Is that what she come visitin' us all of a sudden?"

"None of your business! I guess my own sister's daughter can come and see me any time she takes a notion, and that without writing ahead. What's on her mind, as high as I can make out, is about a young man. If I don't tell you you'll worry the shirt off your back. Pa, you got to be as poky as an old maid. You can't see a pillar-case flopping on the clothes line but what you want to know all about it. Yes; it's about a young man. They are engaged, and they've had a falling out, and she's sorter run away from him to find out if he really cares for her."

"And she's got scared about it and has written him a letter to tell where she is?" queried the husband.

"Go on! It's probably a letter to her ma, though I didn't see it nor ask. I hope she didn't start for town. It's going to storm for sure, and there ain't but one house on the road where she could find shelter. Look down the road and see if you can see her."

"Can't see hide nor hair of any girl," reported Uncle Robert after going out to the highway and taking a long look.

An hour later, with both uncle and aunt fidgeting about their girl visitor, the black clouds that had been hanging up for hours began to advance before a breeze that soon strengthened into a gale. In five minutes the gray afternoon had become twilight. In fifteen there was cold rain and lively hail, and Uncle Robert was blown into the kitchen to exclaim:

"I told her it was going to be a buster, and that she mustn't blame me. I started down the road to meet her, but Lordy what a storm! I couldn't get ten rods if I was to die for it!"

Miss Minnie had reached town and mailed her letter and started back again when the storm broke. Before it came, she thought she could make out a human figure on the road ahead of her, but wasn't sure. The very first gust picked her up and turned her around and deposited her under a roadside tree. She remained there until the gale began to whip the branches off, and then let go her hold and ran for it. There were limbs falling all about her, and the hail-stones peppered her until she ran almost blindly. She hadn't gone a quarter of a mile when, as she crouched and covered her face, she was struck by a flying limb and knew no more.

It was the dim sight of the girl and the scream she uttered when hit, that sent the man who was clinging to the roadside fence back into the highway. He bent over the unconscious form and picked it up and staggered back to the fence and followed it until he saw a light and found the gate of a farmhouse. His lusty calls for help soon brought out a man, and the senseless burden was carried into the house and received by a woman.

"I don't know who she is, but I found her in the road," explained her rescuer. "There is blood on her hair, and I think she was struck down."

"We'll do all we can," replied the man and the woman together, "but you mustn't look for much. We are mighty poor folks. We haven't got no camphor nor whisky, and as for getting a doctor out from town—it can't be done tonight."

The girl was carried into the only bedroom and laid on the only bed, and when her wet clothing had been removed and she was between the sheets, the woman got a cloth and a basin of water and washed away the blood and whispered to the stranger:

"I don't think she's bad hurt. She's just fainted away with the scare of it. When she opens her eyes I'll tell her to go to sleep, and she'll be all right in the morning."

"Do you think it's some young lady from the village?" asked the stranger of the farmer as they talked in whispers in the outer room.

"No, I don't reckon so. I reckon it's that new girl that arrived at Turner's a few days ago. I saw her going towards the village two hours ago."

"Arrived at Turner's? Say, man, are you sure? Is it a strange girl to the neighborhood?"

"I've heard say it was Uncle Bob's niece, and that she come from the city. What ails you, stranger? Does this storm upset you?"

It wasn't the storm. Percy Kincaid had quarreled with the girl he loved and had asked to be his wife. It was about nothing, almost, as most lovers' quarrels are, but pride on either side held off a reconciliation until the lover finally learned that Miss Minnie had gone on a journey and left no word for him. She was going to spend Thanksgiving week in the country. Within two days she had relented; within three he was making every effort to locate her, that he might patch up a peace. He had succeeded. He was going to throw himself on her mercy and ask Uncle Robert for a place at his Thanksgiving table.

The storm grew fiercer as the night advanced. The girl woke and then slept a dreamless sleep, and the lover had long hours in which to ponder and think. When another day came even the cattle could not face the storm nor man move from his door. It was Thanksgiving day. At Uncle Robert's there was a feast to be spread; at Bradley's there was hardly better than poorhouse fare. But the victim of the accident was no longer in bed, and the rescuer no longer cared about the weather, and the farmer folks looked at each other and smiled and whispered:

"Even if we had a turkey and cranberry sauce I don't believe they'd eat a single mouthful. They've just sorter found each other, and are tickled to death."

And when at last they could make their way to Turner's, and Uncle Bob stammered and Aunt Harriet cried for joy, Miss Minnie asked in a way that was almost heartless:

"Why do you take on so? I never had such a lovely Thanksgiving in all my life!"

Pine Knot Injunction Dissolved

In the injunction suit to prevent the county officers of McCreary County from moving their offices from Pine Knot to Whitley City which was tried here last Tuesday the temporary injunction issued by the Circuit Clerk of McCreary County was dissolved and these officers will hereafter be located at Whitley City, which location was chosen at the recent election by the voters of the new County.

Judge Jas. D. Black was presiding at this trial as Special Judge and was accepted by those suing for the injunction, Judge Sampson having been disqualified, so it seems that a considerable amount of these reports which we see occasionally in the daily papers written up from Pine Knot is more noise, issued for political effect than true facts.

Killing at Corbin

While engaged in a crap game just north of the bridge at Corbin last Saturday M. Beasley, a sports man of Lexington, was shot and killed. Several men had been gambling there and the trouble arose over the game, and it is reported that Beasley and other men were shooting at one another. Another report says that Beasley had been shooting at one of the men and that another crept behind a fence or stone wall and shot him from behind or from the side where he could not be seen. Arrests were made but we were unable to learn the particular persons implicated.

The place where this murder took place is a well known spot and many killings have taken place in the immediate vicinity which is known as "Hell's half-acre," which is just beyond the bridge in Laurel County. It is no uncommon thing to be passing through on the train and see several groups of men sitting out on the ground playing cards in plain view of everyone and why this has not been broken up long ago is strange and hard to understand.

"Sure Cure"

"I would like to guide suffering women to a sure cure for female troubles," writes Mrs. R. E. Mercer, of Frozen Camp, W. Va. "I have found no medicine equal to Cardui. I had suffered for about four years. Would have headache for a week at a time, until I would be nearly crazy. I took Cardui and now I never have the headache any more."

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

The pains from which many women suffer every month are unnecessary. It's not safe to trust to strong drugs, right at the time of the pains. Better to take Cardui for a while, before and after, to strengthen the system and cure the cause. This is the sensible, the scientific, the right way. Try it.

REV. CHAS. SAGER SAYS
Mr. C. A. ABBOTT, August 11, 1906.
Dear Sir: I have known for over 40 years of the effects of Wilson's Remedy (Wilson's Preparation of Hypophosphites and Biotin) in cases of pulmonary trouble. At this point I will say to you what you have not before known of; that 40 years since, while I was a resident of N.Y. City, I was severely ill with lung trouble. Physicians said I was a consumptive, and my family physician told my wife that he thought I could not recover. My attention was directed to the Wilson Remedy, which I used with splendid effect. I have been on my feet and at work ever since my cure. Yours truly,
REV. CHAS. SAGER,
Pastor M. E. Church, Hunter, (Greene Co.) N. Y.

On Dec. 1, 1905, Mr. Sager wrote Mr. Abbott: "My health is very good."

If you will write Mr. Abbott he will gladly furnish you any further information you desire.

UNCLE RUBE

The most pleasing and enjoyable entertainment given in many months in this city was "Uncle Rube" given by students and members of the Union College faculty last Monday evening in the Union College Chapel. Many who attended were given a genuine surprise at the talent displayed, unable to realize that such realistic acting could be found in this city and especially so since the time taken in preparation was far short of that usually taken for such affairs. The stage setting was cleverly arranged faithfully portraying the scenes which were being reproduced and the makeup of the characters was complete.

It is not easy to pick any one individual star from this cast as all were exceedingly clever in their parts. Reuben Rodney, as portrayed by Prof. H. W. Ricketts was a genuine farmer, big hearted and occasionally loving his "nip" of hard cider. He was undoubtedly the star of the cast and his work could hardly have been improved upon.

Prof. H. M. Oldfield, as Deacon Smailey, the bewhiskered villain well represented the character he wished to portray and certainly looked the part.

Prof. C. L. Brown, as Mark, the Deacon's son, could not have been placed to a better advantage. His makeup was great and his impersonation of the good-for-nothing son of his rascally father was all that could have been desired. This part was well taken care of.

Earl Stanfill and T. J. Gilbert as the artist and New York swell, respectively, were dressed appropriately and filled their roles cleverly.

Ike, the hired man, by J. L. Carroll, here was another star. Usually in the part of the country man the acting is overdone and thus the effect is lost, but in this case Mr. Carroll seemed to know when to let well enough alone and carried his part out splendidly.

Walter Jarvis, as Bob Green was a real blubbinging rube.

Robert Paulkner, the constable had little opportunity to show his ability as an actor but did well with the part assigned him.

The ladies in the cast—we are almost afraid to comment on their work. Each was cleverly brought out and if any one in particular was the bright and shining star we would not hazard an opinion as to who was this particular one. It was no effort for Miss Eva Swearingin to act the part of the pretty "school marin," and Gordon Gray, the young artist, could not have been blamed for trying to find the red ear of corn.

Miss Robert Sandusky played the part of the charming widow splendidly and those present were not surprised and were glad when she at last received the proposal of marriage. Her makeup was clever and very appropriate.

And now "Pages," the wail from New York. Miss Thelma Stratton did some clever and realistic acting in this role which could not have been improved upon by an amateur in any place.

Altogether the plot was interesting and the thought well portrayed throughout the entire program and those who missed this have cause for regret. The proceeds go to the Athletic Association and a nice little sum was raised.

VIEW OF UPPER LAKE AND LIBERAL ARTS BUILDING, NATIONAL CONSERVATION EXPOSITION, Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. and Oct. 1913.

The above view will give some idea of the great beauty of the National Conservation Exposition grounds and the character of the buildings which are now under construction.

EAST TENNESSEE BUILDING, NATIONAL CONSERVATION EXPOSITION, Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. and Oct. 1913.

This building is to be erected by the thirty-four counties of the Eastern Division of Tennessee, and will contain exhibits from each county of its natural products, minerals, and woods, etc. This building will contain 30,000 feet of exhibit space, and the exhibits made therein will show the extent and variety of natural resources of one of the most favored regions of the Middle South.

THE ALL SOUTH BUILDING.

The Southern States Building of the National Conservation Exposition, on which will be held at Knoxville for two months, September and October, 1913, will be one of the largest and most attractive structures of this great national show. This building is designed to contain exhibits of manufactured products of the sixteen Southern States, especially such as will show the processes of manufacture which prevent waste and utilize by-products.

VIEW OF LAKE AND FORESTRY BUILDING, NATIONAL CONSERVATION EXPOSITION, Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. and Oct. 1913.

The above view shows the Forestry Building, completed, National Conservation Exposition. To the left of this building, as an annex, will be erected the Minerals Building. These buildings will occupy the most beautiful site on the grounds, the elevations being such as to afford a bird's-eye view of lakes, drives, buildings and amusement district.

NATIONAL CONSERVATION EXPOSITION,

Knoxville, Tennessee, September and October, 1913, Provides Attractive Grounds For Amusement District.

The section of the grounds of the National Conservation Exposition, Knoxville, Tenn., September and October, 1913, which has been set aside as the amusement district, will be arranged by landscape architects with a view to making the location one of extraordinary attractiveness. Terrace

Park, as it is known, will be famous always hereafter. The plan decided upon by the exposition management in this feature will, when carried out, afford the most unique display and arrangement of grounds ever seen in a midway section. The lay of the land is such as to permit of a street that will traverse the section from the main gateway on the lake to the lower end, turning in a gradual curve to a point near the beginning and again winding toward the upper end of the grounds back to the lower entrance. This will afford a series of terraces, and the amusement place will be an arrangement to rise in tiers from the lake front to the back of the grounds. It does not require a stretch of imagination to picture the appearance of this section when illuminated at night. This plan is part of the general landscape work which will be carried out in all parts of the exposition grounds. The management feels that one of the greatest attractions which the exposition can present to visitors can be formed by utilizing the natural beauty of the location in modern landscape work. A beautiful park is quite as necessary as fire buildings and exhibits, and the locality lends itself to the most artistic plans that a landscape artist could design.

OUTLINE OF PLANS FOR EXHIBITS

National Conservation Exposition, Knoxville, Tenn., 1913. Planned in Accordance With History

RESOURCES OF SOUTHLAND

Will illustrate the ways in which the Natural Wealth in Forests, Minerals and Human Efficiency May Be More Effectively Utilized.

The National Conservation Exposition is planned in accordance with exposition history especially to illustrate the modern idea of forecasting prospective development, especially throughout the Southern States. In a broad way the design is to illustrate the ways in which the natural wealth in forests, waters, minerals, and human efficiency are now used and may be still more effectively utilized in promoting the prosperity and enduring the perpetuity of the American people.

The Resources in Lands.

Recognizing the soil made fruitful by the natural water supply as that resource on which more than all others the generations of men must depend for materials for food and clothing, it is planned to devote large space to the exhibits of the soil and its products, of the best methods of maintaining and increasing production, and of progress in improving the grade and yields of plant and animal products.

Forest Resources.

Our forest resources are second in importance only to the land itself, because of the many important industries for which the forest furnishes the raw material, and of the forest's beneficent influences upon such other natural riches as waters for irrigation, power and navigation, fish and game animals, and the land itself. Considerable attention is to be devoted to forest exhibits.

It is planned to illustrate the existing forest resources, with their production and reproduction, their utilization, and their influences upon other resources.

Water Resources.

The water resources of the country in general and of the South in particular will be displayed with reference to the use of water (a) for domestic supply, (b) for agricultural production (whether applied by natural means or irrigation), (c) for power, and (d) for navigation.

Mineral.

The mineral resources of the country as a whole and especially of South-eastern United States will be exhibited as the chief basis for the greatness of this country in manufacturing and as a means of maintaining our industrial supremacy.

Human Efficiency—Health.

By far the most important of all our natural resources is man himself. It is to render his life more efficient that any form of conservation is advocated. Those vital forces intimate to himself are highest and noblest, and to their development, conservation and best use deep thought and great effort should be devoted.

The abolition of child labor, particularly in the Southern States, the reduction of infant mortality, the eradication of disease, especially tuberculosis, the hook worm and typhoid fever will be graphically presented.

Education.

Another most important element in human development is education. The school is a crucial problem in the commercial upbuilding of the Southern States. School hygiene and sanitation, domestic economy, vocational training, industrial education for the negro, and rural school advancement shall be subjects for exhibition and shall be presented in the form of model demonstrations and in other ways.

Domestic Economy.

So important is this subject considered as an element in greater human efficiency that, although it might properly be included as a part of another section, it is thought well to devote a separate paragraph to it. Homemaking is the first and most important step in nation making. The work of the wife and mother in the establishment and maintenance of a comfortable home, in the preparing of proper foods and by her wisdom and radiation of domestic tranquility and happiness can contribute at least as much to the prosperity of the nation and the efficiency of its citizens as can the husband and father by his efforts in the outside world.

Good Roads.

Good roads are necessary requisites to development. Exhibits will be made of good roads, in the form of (1) actual demonstration roads, (2) models showing materials, manner of construction, and the finished work, (3) road making materials and machinery, (4) maps of important highways, (5) photographic enlargements of both good and bad roads and the consequences and industrial and social conditions attending each.

Fish and Game Resources.

The co-operation of Audubon societies, fish and game commissions, and other organizations for the preservation of birds and animal life will be shown in exhibiting our animal resources and encouraging their perpetuity.

PRETTY THANKSGIVING DAY DINNER TABLE

By ADELE MENDEL.

HOW much easier it is for the hostess of today to prepare for a Thanksgiving dinner than it was for the hostess of a hundred years ago! Then it meant not hours, but weeks of planning, for the hostess had none of the conveniences or labor-saving devices that we are so familiar with as necessities today. No indeed, her dinner had to be cooked on an open fire, not on a modern range or gas stove. Electricity would have seemed nothing less than a miracle. The simple utensils used in the home of the present day would have caused the greatest amount of astonishment. A lemon squeezer would have been regarded as a curious object, but then so would have been a food chopper, an egg beater, or a can opener.

The coffee was always roasted and ground at home. There was no prepared mustard, cocoa, vanilla, gelatin or prepared yeast. String beans, lima beans, asparagus or peas were not served in November. Tomatoes were called love apples and were not recognized as a vegetable. Everything was home made, for groceries were not delivered at the house in sealed packages.

There were few hothouse flowers such as we are accustomed to adorn our tables. The flowers were all of the old-fashioned variety. Orchids were unknown, the chrysanthemums were very small; roses were not like the roses of today, but carnations were used in abundance.

Invitations had to be issued a long time ahead to insure a reply. If the guest resided at any distance.

Verily, we have much to be grateful for, when we consider how many wonderful inventions there have been to lighten the housekeeper's labors. Now, when Thanksgiving is celebrated in every state in the Union, there is no one who hasn't something to be thankful for.

Thanksgiving ever is a day of pleasant reminiscences; a day when the family and friends are gathered around the well laden table in a spirit of rejoicing. Hospitality is the characteristic note of the day and it really ought to be a pleasure and a glad some task to plan a Thanksgiving dinner.

The housewife of 1912 will be wise if she follows the example of her great grandmother and plans her dinner and table decorations in advance so that she will have little to do on Thanksgiving day.

The decorations for a Thanksgiving table would be very effective if it had for its main decorations the turkey. For, what is a Thanksgiving dinner without a turkey? The table cloth around the edge of the table is trimmed with large sized turkeys cut out of crepe paper in realistic coloring. Paper turkeys hold the place cards. The same bird ornaments the napkins. Small baskets trimmed with chrysanthemums hold the salted almonds. For the center decoration of the table use a large dark red basket filled with ears of corn. The imitation corn and leaves can be made of yellow paper with green paper for leaves. Wheat, oats, fruit, or flowers or anything in keeping with the harvest idea may be used.

A college girl who has taken up the business of making table souvenirs and decorations has gone to America's early history for the appropriate little things used at Thanksgiving. Taking the year 1630 as the proper period for her charming trifles—the year in which the first Thanksgiving was celebrated in Boston—the clever girl has turned out little puppets dressed as the Pilgrim fathers, Indians and many a fair New England maid known in song and story. She has made crude cardboard houses, covered with log-cabin paper, and for the animals used by the first settlers she goes to the toy store, where suitable and cheap trifles are found.

For the finer Thanksgiving tables she arranges, her New England scenes of those long ago times are as instructive as they are beautiful. The center of the table is always used for the picture she wishes to represent, and there, with her quaint dolls, her Puritan maids and men, her primitive homes, wigwags, wild turkeys, deer, ducks, cotton and what-not, she will turn out pictures as amusing to grown-ups as to children.

Some of this brilliant woman's notions could be copied at home with very little expenditure. The history books give any number of pretty scenes to copy from and in shopping the least elaborate the work would be lessened and the effect be just as good.

For instance, there was always a blockhouse in yesteryear, with cannon before it, and turkeys were roasted in the open air, and there were piles of corn when the harvest was in and so on. In a farm home it would be easy to have dried ears of corn about, shucks and all showing, and in a city ears of popcorn could be used.

Take the blockhouse scene and prepare the picture for the possible invasion of hostile Indians. Cover a square cardboard box with brown paper for the log house; trace over it with black crayon a rude imitation of logs, cut slit windows, put on a rough chimney and leave the door half open, with a little doll, dressed as a Puritan child, peeping out. About the blockhouse group some toy pine trees, one or two Puritan men, two maids and maybe a friendly Indian with feathered headdress. The maids and child are dressed in grave gray gowns with white kerchiefs and caps, and the white men wear buff-colored knee-breeches, red waistcoats and green or gray tail coats. The good Indian wears war paint and, maybe, drags a cloak of fur behind him. Dolls for the purpose can be had at 10 cents apiece—four inches high—and they could be dressed in tissue paper. They are held to the table with long black-headed pins, or rather to a board upon which the scene is set and afterward covered over in suitable manner. One of the metal turkeys, sold now in all the candy and toyshops for Thanksgiving, could appear in the scene and also a deer and a fat goose. The birds and animals can be had from five cents up.

All the things mentioned in these dramatic times could be symbolized with pretty trifles bought at the ten cent store or elsewhere, for favors. The following things are seen and are all suitable: Paper mache pumpkin pies, candy boxes made like ears of corn, kegs, cannon, Indian baskets and tomahawks. The kegs were always a part of the New England Thanksgiving, and they held root beer—made by the Indian women—and molasses, which was used for the pies famous to this day.

Another amusing idea for a Thanksgiving table scene could be a demonstration of the great progress of the years. This scene might hold a paper aeroplane, an automobile, little French bandboxes and dolls dressed to depict the various races that have invaded the country. There could be a negro, a Chinaman, a Russian Cossack, an Indian laborer, a German, a Frenchman and so on. There should be little American flags for souvenirs or trinkets, flag candy boxes and plenty of red, white and blue ribbon tying souvenirs, place cards and menus.

All the candy holders made for the season show some red, white and blue, while the paper napkins and table covers have just the right things in their rough picture borders.

PUMPKIN TIME IN BUGVILLE.

Greedy Bug—Gracious! If I could only get one of those pumpkin home, what fine pie we could have for Thanksgiving!

All Have Joys.

While many have sorrows, all have joys, and these are the supreme occasion of thanks. "Oh, give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endureth forever!" exclaims the psalmist, who at another time observes: "Out of the depth cried I unto the Lord and he heard me."

No kind in order to be kind etc.
